Documentary shows terrifying effects of Covid measures on children and young people LOCKDOWN RIGHTS OF CHILDREN gives voice to children and young people, but also experts who can care of the health of children and young people and provide an overview of the traces of the coronavirus crisis that have already left and go even further.

With children and young people, this film was developed: they filmed from their point of view, thus showing how confinement affects their very personal experience.

Despite the warnings of several experts, Young people have been called virus spins and medically criticized for their behavior.

Doctor Andreas Sönnichsen notes: Measurements in children do much more harm than Corona.

Critics are overturned as covidots, conspiracy theorists and far-right extremists.

Children were implicitly given the responsibility of protecting their own grandparents from illness and therefore suggested to be guilty if grandfather or grandmother fell ill after the visit.

This vision of the world of a threat is already communicated to the little ones in kindergarten.

I see this is the biggest problem, says Nina Proll, another protagonist of the film, critically questioning the measurements and complaining about the lack of speech.

Psychoneuroimmunologist Christian Schubert reiterates: I find that children are taken away from their dignity.

They are placed in the last corner by the teachers and appointed.

Child of the day checks to see if others are wearing the mask correctly, Child Spy Katrin Skala says: Teenagers are locked up with parents who themselves can no longer. In the meantime, children come to us with serious illnesses.

What has politics or society done for this group since the start of the pandemic? Have they been protected?

Has the policy carefully weighed the benefits and harms of measures for children and young people?

No ! says public health expert Martin Sprenger.

And neurobiologist Gerald Hüther concludes: When this is all over, we will have to ask our children for forgiveness for what we have done to them.
